The End of the Adams Mine Search.

George E. Christelaw, one of Patterson's party who started from Socorro on the 8th day last September, in search of the mythical Adams mine, gives the following account of the expedition: "On September 24th our party was reduced to eight men, nine of the original party returning to Socorro. We continued to prospect the country, working toward the San Juan river, but finding none of the precious metals. Almost everywhere coal was encountered in great veins from six to eight feet thick, and often we found the water so strongly impregnated with coal oil that it was not fit to drink. We struck the San Juan river about fifty miles west of Nolan's store, where the party again divided, five returning to Nolan's store, where Benjamin Swift left the party that had separated from us, and that was the last time that he was ever seen alive by white men.

Patterson, Baker and myself continued to prospect down the San Juan river, and the canon that empty into it, endeavoring to find an entrance into the Navajo reservation, in which we were not successful. We would enter a canon by a broad Indian trail, follow it for days toward the mountains, only to find it end in a box, from which there was no escape only except by trail on which we had entered it.

We followed down the San Juan river to a point where it flows through a canon with smooth walls that must have been nearly 1,000 feet high, where we could go no further, and finally had to turn and go out by Winslow, Arizona.

We found many fertile canons, some of them with water running through and some of them dry. The Indians have cultivated many of these canons, raising big crops of corn, pumpkins and squashes. Our party picked one of these squashes that was a full load for a pack mule, and was, we thought, equal to any sweet potato. The country is a sand-stone formation, except in the Chuck-lu mountains. So far as we could see there is no place where one could reasonably expect to find gold or silver in paying quantities. There is coal oil in many localities dripping from the rocks or covering the surface of springs. In fact, the larger part of the reservation appears to be an oil field.

It is stated that an independent company of New York capitalists has been formed to complete the D. & R. G. road from Espinola to Albuquerque. Should this extension be built, the builders will no doubt see the policy of coming by Cerrillos, and opening up the best coal fields in the West to competing lines.

The artesian well outfit ten miles out on the line of the White Oaks railway, has gone down nearly 300 feet with the second well, and has an abundance of soft, clear water.

Our Christmas Drawing.

Two solid gold watches, one gentleman's and one lady's—will be drawn by the cash subscribers to the RUSTLER who pay three dollars for the paper previous to Christmas day and secure a number. These watches are both very handsome and perfect time pieces, carrying the guarantee of Mr. J. R. Hudson, the Santa Fe Jeweler who sold them to this office. Each cash subscriber secures the paper for the year 1889, besides having a chance to draw one or the other of these watches. If you are already a subscriber, send an extra copy to your relative or friend at a distance and help us out. The watches can be seen at this office.

The manner of drawing the gold watches will be by placing each subscriber's number, as it appears opposite his name on the list, on tickets, the tickets to be placed in a box, shaken up and drawn by a child until all the numbers are drawn. The last two numbers out will draw the watches.

Wm. Kasee, the well known pioneer of this camp, claims the honor of being the first discoverer of anthracite coal in this vicinity. As an operator he formed the Kasee Coal Co., which he informs us is on a solid footing and can be regarded as one of the most responsible companies in the territory. This company mines for the market the best grades of both anthracite and bituminous coal.

The Diamond Palace, Sharick's mammoth jewelry house at Albuquerque, is well worth visiting when you go to that city. The array of diamonds, jewelry, silver ware, watches and clocks, presents a dazzling light to the beholder. For magnificent selections and for genuine bargains, purchasers should not fail to give Sharick's Diamond Palace a call.

We have the agency for the Home Comfort Range, Charter Oak and Great Western Stove Co.—Stoves and Ranges.

McK. S. Co.

The RUSTLER wants 100 new subscribers by Christmas day, and each subscriber who pays three dollars for a year's subscription before Christmas day, will be entitled to the paper for the year 1889, and will also get a chance in a lady's or gentleman's gold watch, which will be drawn by some one of these subscribers, on Christmas day. The watch will be purchased from and on the guarantee of some jeweler at Santa Fe or Albuquerque. The paper takes this means of increasing its circulation and of raising the money—$200.00—with which to make the last payment on its office, thus placing it substantially upon its feet. There should be enough people in the local territory of the paper to make up this number, who are not now subscribers, and we hope they will come to the front at once. The numbers are now ready and each subscriber will get his ticket. Those who send us subscriptions by mail will be forwarded a receipt and ticket by return mail. The drawing will be placed in the hands of a committee and is guaranteed to be fair. The name of the lucky drawer will be published in the New Year's number.
